What's New For New Year's

Black & White Gem Combinations
 A Great New Look For 2008

Classic black and white jewelry not only displays the traditional colors for New Year's celebrations, but it also possesses a standard of elegance that never goes out of style.

For New Year's, these beautifully formal black and white colors symbolize the birth of the new year and the passing of the old. And in 2008 you'll find black and white gems in a surprising range of both brilliantly transparent and lustrously opaque types...a total of 24 different kinds.

For example, black gems include sparkling diamond, spinel, garnet, quartz, sapphire, and tourmaline. Or you can choose opaque black gems such as onyx, opal, jade, coral, and Tahitian pearls as well as smooth black enamel.

Sparkling white gems include diamond, sapphire, topaz, spinel, quartz, zircon, and beryl. And you also have a choice of beautiful opaque white gems such as moonstone, mother of pearl, opal, jade, and either Akoya or freshwater pearls.

Today, leading jewelry designers are combining all kinds of black and white gems in stunning combinations for high-fashion rings, bracelets, earrings, necklaces, and pins set in a variety of glowing white metals such as white gold, platinum, sterling silver, and palladium. Black metals are also growing in popularity with black gold and black titanium leading the way.
